HEROIC EFFORTS MADE TO CLEAR ROAD TO CLEAR ROAD FOR CURRENCY

PASSENGERS ON CARMANIA TELL OF WORK UNDER TREMENDOUS DIFFICULTIES.

FIRE ORIGIN UNKNOWN

MOST LIVES LOST IN ATTEMPTS TO LAUNCH BOATS.

CAPTAIN INCH DID NOT KNOW

Had He Been Aware Help So Near, No Lives Would Have Been Sacrificed.

London, Oct. 13.—The stories told by the passengers of the steamship Carmania and other liners which went to the rescue of the burning Voltorno describe heroic efforts in the face of almost insuperable difficulties to save passengers and crew of the doomed ship.

As yet, information is lacking as to how the fire originated but it is shown that the fact that no more lives were lost was due in the first place to the wireless and in the second to Captain Inch's happy idea of calling the Narragansett for oil. There is some discrepancy in the stories with regard to the behavior of the crew, but it is significant that of the crew numbering 33, 18 are reported lost, while most of the officers remained aboard and were eventually rescued.

What issues clearly from all the narratives is that practically all the lives were sacrificed in attempts to launch the boats before the arrival of the other steamers, and that had Captain Inch known so much help would have been forthcoming, practically all might have been saved.

The Carmania arrived at Fishguard today, but her commander declined to give out an official statement until he had submitted his report to the company officials at Liverpool, where the Carmania is due tomorrow.

Carmania at Fishguard.

Fishguard, Oct. 13.—The Carmania, the first to aid of the doomed steamship Voltorno, arrived here shortly after 1 o'clock this morning.

Captain Barr met the newspaper correspondents with a refusal to say a word about the Voltorno until the Carmania reached Liverpool and he had delivered his report to the company. He referred his would-be interviewers to the ship's bulletin for an accurate statement of the tragedy. The greater part of the contents of this already had become history. The fire on the Voltorno appears to have originated in her cargo hold. When it became evident that the flames had gained the mastery, Captain Barr's only device was to call all his energy to the salvation of his passengers.

The Carmania's bulletin says that six small boats were launched from the Voltorno, two of them with thirty-five persons each on board. The greater part of the contents of this already had become history. The fire on the Voltorno appears to have originated in her cargo hold. When it became evident that the flames had gained the mastery, Captain Barr's only device was to call all his energy to the salvation of his passengers.

After the failure of the life boats from the Carmania to reach the burning ship and when Captain Barr met the newspaper correspondents with a refusal to say a word about the Voltorno until the Carmania reached Liverpool and he had delivered his report to the company. He referred his would-be interviewers to the ship's bulletin for an accurate statement of the tragedy. The greater part of the contents of this already had become history. The fire on the Voltorno appears to have originated in her cargo hold. When it became evident that the flames had gained the mastery, Captain Barr's only device was to call all his energy to the salvation of his passengers.

Bailed in his attempt to establish communication between the Carmania and the Voltorno, Captain Barr sent out broadcast wireless calls, which caused a number of ships to come to their aid.

In the afternoon Captain Barr made another attempt to reach the Voltorno by throwing overboard life rafts which he hoped might be secured by those on board. But this attempt also proved futile. In the meantime the despairing messages from Captain Inch of the Voltorno calling for succor, grew more insistent as the flames spread.

Great clouds of smoke enveloped the ship.

Boat Is Lowered.

At about 7 o'clock in the evening Captain Inch succeeded in lowering a boat in charge of the second officer of the Voltorno and a crew of four men, with the intention of taking a line to the Grosvenor Ketchikan. The small boat, after a desperate struggle,

DEBATE IN SENATE SHOWS MAJORITY OPPOSE RECESS OR ADJOURNMENT.

INVISIBLE BOARD IS AT WORK

Lewis Claims These Now in Control of Currency Lead Fight Against Proposed Bill.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Debate in the senate today made it quite plain that there is to be no adjournment or recess of congress until the currency reform bill is disposed of. At the same time, with the prospect of having the currency measure brought into the senate from the committee anywhere from early next month to some time in January, democrats prepared to object to having any other general legislation set for consideration during the first two months of the regular session, beginning December 1, on the ground that the legislative road must be kept clear for currency.

Senator Lewis, democratic whip, voiced the sentiment of the majority leaders against any adjournment or recess. "The invisible board of control which objects to domination of the finances of the country being placed in the hands of a visible board," Senator Lewis said, "has been at work endeavoring to show that it could coerce the senate, this government into declining to act on this legislation, or accepting the alternative of writing the bill according to the ideas of those gentlemen. The question now is whether we shall allow these gentlemen to place themselves in the position before the country of having been able by their organization to bully the senate into having permitted a recess."

Senator Burke Smith, republican, objected to setting any other legislation for consideration before February. Senator Smith blocking a plan to fix January 29 as the time for taking up a woman suffrage constitutional amendment.

Senator Borah and other republicans insisted that the senate should either attend to business or recess and Senator Ashurst, democrat, protested against the policy of recessing for three days at a time during the consideration of the currency bill by the committee.

The committee today heard a delegation of country bankers, appointed by the recent Reuter conference, who criticized the administration bill in general particulars and urged a number of amendments.

ARGUMENT IN MEMPHIS CASE

Witnesses Declare Trust Company Organized and Directed by J. M. Sims, Now in Prison.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 13.—Argument was begun today in the trial of J. M. McDonald, O. R. Helton, E. L. Hendry and E. R. Odie, charged with using the mails to defraud in connection with the operation of the American Trust company of Memphis, which closed its doors in August, 1911, after an existence of two months. The case will be given to the jury tomorrow afternoon.

Hendry, the last witness called by the defense, like the other defendants declared that the trust company was organized and directed by J. M. Sims, its vice president, who has already pleaded guilty to misuse of the mails and is now serving sentence in the United States prison at Atlanta. Hendry denied that he had ever taken an active part as a director, although his name appeared on the company's literature as a member of the directorate. He declared that he had never profited personally from his brief business.

It is contended by the government that a close relationship existed between the American Trust company and the All Night and Day bank of Memphis, one of a chain of short-lived night and day banks, and of which Hendry was president. The Memphis All Night and Day bank closed its doors shortly after taking over the affairs of the trust company. Several of its officers have been convicted of irregular banking methods.

Sixteen Perish in Alberta.

Edmonton, Alberta, Oct. 13.—Sixteen persons are believed to have perished when the Hudson Bay company's tug, Primrose, which left Fort Chipewyan for Fort Fond Du Lac, twenty-five days ago. Generally the trip requires four days. Names of the crew and passengers are not known here.

was removed to a local undertaker's and prepared for burial.

The dead man was about forty years of age and came here from Coleman about two years ago. Prior to that time he conducted a barber shop at Oronville. He had been operating the rooming house here for a period of about two months. He is survived by a widow and five children, several of the latter nearly grown young women, all of whom reside here.

Dave M. Osborne, a well known resident of Temple for nearly thirty years and a former long time member of the local police force, but now connected with the waterworks, was taken into custody and waived a preliminary hearing. The principals in the affair were former neighbors, having occupied adjoining houses on Sixth street. Domestic troubles are believed to have led to the killing. Dave Osborne waived examining trial and was released in bond of $7,500.

Several hundred people were in the immediate vicinity of the shooting and it was all over before anyone knew what was impending or steps could be taken to separate the men. The body

NO DECISION IN THE SULZER CASE

COURT HOLDS ONLY HOUR AND A HALF SESSION AND ADJOURNS.

WILL PERMIT MORE ARGUMENT

Alleged Attempts to Suppress Evidence Not Specified in Original Articles of Impeachment.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 13.—The high court of impeachment which is to decide the fate of Governor Sulzer failed today to reach a verdict. After a session of an hour and a half, virtually all of which was held in secret, the court unexpectedly adjourned until 11:30 o'clock tomorrow to permit further argument by counsel relative to the testimony of Allan A. Ryan, Ambassador Henry Morganthau and Duncan W. Peck, superintendent of public works.

The testimony had to do with the alleged efforts of Governor Sulzer to suppress evidence against him and to obtain political influence to stop the trial.

The defenses alleged in this connection were not specified in the articles of impeachment and upon the convening of court today Judge Miller of the court of appeals raised the question as to where they fitted in.

The executive once followed. When the public again was admitted it was announced by Presiding Judge Cullen that the court desired counsel to argue as to whether the acts and conversations of the governor, testified to by Peck, Morganthau and Ryan "can be considered as being acts of misconduct for which the respondent can be convicted under article 4, or only as conversational evidence of the other allegations stated in the charges and whether the court has the power to amend the articles if they are insufficient to include those acts so as to include them."

The court then adjourned until tomorrow to permit further argument by counsel relative to the testimony of Allan A. Ryan, Ambassador Henry Morganthau and Duncan W. Peck, superintendent of public works.

No Testimony Disputed.

The testimony of none of these witnesses was disputed by the defense as far as contradictory evidence was concerned, and for that reason is said to be considered by some of the members of the court the strongest evidence in proof of the governor's alleged attempt to hold office.

In view of the fact that each of the eight articles that is to be voted on separately, it was found that when the members of the court were ready to convene today that there was much doubt as to under which article the testimony had been considered. It was said further that some of the members felt that the evidence was not sufficient to grant the as yet undecided motion to strike out articles 1 and 6, the "money articles," on the constitutional ground that they dealt with offenses committed before the governor took office.

They thought it was desirable, therefore, it was said, either to strengthen article 4 by including the Ryan-Morganthau-Peck charges or to set them apart as an additional article.

The opening of court was delayed more than half an hour on account of the conference of the nine judges of the court of appeals.

It was announced by counsel that the hour of reconvening the court would be at 11:30 o'clock.

CLAIMS OTHER CRIMES

HARRY SPENCER LABORS WITH POLICE TO CONVICT OF HIS DEPRAVITY.

Says Robbed Victim of Iroquois Theatre Fire—Gives Details of Others.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Henry Spencer, confessed laborer of Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, labored with the police today to convince them that he is guilty of other crimes to which he has confessed. Handcuffed between two detectives he rode around the city pointing out places he mentioned as spots where he had committed crimes.

At an obscure pawnshop he called for a ring awarded the day after the death of Mrs. Anna Bell Wright, who he claims to have beaten to death at her home last spring. The ring was identified as belonging to Mrs. Wright. Spencer pointed out a building at 2800 Milwaukee avenue which he set fire after beating a man, his wife and two children. The fire department records show that Trooper Saininsky, his wife and two children had been rescued unconscious by firemen when called there to extinguish a blaze.

Spencer, having practically convinced the police that he was at least a murderer and the perpetrator of innumerable robberies, claimed added notoriety as a shool teacher. He said that at the time of the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago in which 600 lives were lost, he was among the first on the scene and assisted in carrying out bodies.

One woman whom he bore out was richly gowned, but burned beyond recognition. Watchfulness of the police prevented him from robbing the body at the time, but that night, probably the most profoundly and in the city's history, he obtained a woman accomplice, went to one of the numerous temporary morgues and "identified" the body as the sister of his wife, "Della Skarupa."

By this ruse they obtained possession of the body and had it buried. "We got $1,500 worth of jewelry and $1,000 in cash off her," he said. "She is still buried under the name of Skarupa."

ACCIDENT BOARD'S FIRST CASE

Refuses to Approve Case in Which Attorney Gets Third of Amount of Settlement.

Austin, Oct. 13.—The state industrial accident board took first official action today on the initial case under the workman's compensation act. The board also set its seal of disapproval upon the proposed settlement offered into between a lawyer and his client whereby the lawyer was to receive one-third of the amount of the settlement for the death of a negro. This the board believed exorbitant and refused to approve. The approval of the board is necessary on all settlements where a lump sum is paid over. Such settlements are believed unfair and unjust to the beneficiaries and will not be allowed, except in cases where a weekly payment is made. Such cases are beyond the jurisdiction of the board.

Shin Bone in Spine.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 13.—Ralph M. Armstrong, a prominent club man of this city, is recovering at a local hospital from an unusual operation—that of the grafting of a piece of his shin bone into his spine.

A year ago he injured his spine by falling in a bath tub at his home. He apparently recovered, but several months later again suffered spinal injuries while playing baseball. An operation was decided upon and Armstrong was again declared cured.

GERMAN SHIP IS WELCOMED

UNITED STATES SEES SIGNIFICANCE IN THAT NATION'S ACTION.

SOBERING EFFECT ON HUERTA

With Additions to Warships Now Cruising Off Mexican Coast May Prevent Extremes.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Germany's decision to dispatch a warship to Mexican waters attracted wide attention in official circles here tonight. No intimation had been received here of Germany's intention and President Wilson was informed only by press dispatches of the action.

No formal comment was made on the incident, but it was apparent that the Washington government was not displeased. The sending of a German warship is in line with the policy of other European governments which have vessels cruising off the Mexican coast from time to time during critical moments of Mexico's internal strife.

Significance was attached to the action by official Washington, however, because it was accepted as indicating that European powers who previously had recognized the Huerta government—among which were Germany and Great Britain—now saw evidence of Huerta's inability to compose the situation.

Latest advice to Washington are to the effect that the British government is deeply concerned over its recognition of Huerta and it is even declared that King George and Queen Mary have taken a personal interest in the situation with a view to measures that would support the policy of the United States. It is reported that Great Britain is prepared at the first opportunity to repudiate the recognition and that failure of the Huerta administration to hold a constitutional election on October 24, probably would be held as sufficient cause in this connection, officials here recall the British government's recent statement that recognition of Huerta was "provisional pending an election."

Will Sober Huerta.

While the American war vessels in Mexico waters outnumber the foreign ships and will render any aid, not only to Americans, but all foreigners in case of emergency, it is believed by the Washington authorities that the sending of a German vessel immediately after the arrest of the members of the chamber of deputies may have a sobering effect on Provisional President Huerta and prevent him from going to further extremes.

When the representation went forth from the United States to the Mexican federal authorities today calling on General Huerta to protect the lives of the imprisoned deputies, it was pointed out that this action was taken not because the United States has any desire to interfere in the internal affairs of the southern republic, but in the cause of humanity.

Similar representations were made when Madero and Suarez were arrested. Whether or not the protest of the United States against injuring the deputies will be followed by any drastic action should Huerta defy warnings and punish the deputies in one of the questions being discussed by those who are shaping the administration's policy.

No change in the attitude of this country was announced today, but President Wilson and his advisers are discussing what the next step would be and tomorrow's cabinet meeting may bring forth a discussion on the subject.

Another development that is occupying the attention of the department officials is the yellow fever epidemic in Carmen and Campeche. American warships usually lie a few miles off the coast and are not in danger of being infected, but the epidemic is picked up will be carefully examined. More care will be taken by the navy doctors in granting shore leave to American sailors.

Ship Martha Will Be Sent.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—The cruiser Hertha which is now being used as a school ship, probably will be selected as the most available warship for duty along the eastern coast of Mexico. She is now cruising in New England waters.

A cruiser from Europe scarcely could be chosen for this work as the German squadron has been depleted by the withdrawal of four cruisers for service in Mediterranean waters owing to the recent hostilities in the Balkan.

Huerta Assures Safety of Deputies.

Mexico City, Oct. 13.—President Huerta has assured the American charge d'affaires, Nelson O'Shaughnessy, that no violence will be done the imprisoned deputies. The American charge met the president by chance and told him of the beneficial effect which would be produced throughout the civilized world should harm come to the deputies.

Later today the embassy received instructions from the state department at Washington to make precisely such representations; whereupon Mr. O'Shaughnessy formally communicated to the executive the Washington administration communication on the subject.

While promising that no harm would befall the deputies and assuring that there never had been any intention to inflict physical injury General Huerta asserted that most of the deputies would have to stand trial for offenses against the government. He gave no intimation that any of them would be released in the near future.

Opposition to Warships.

Vera Cruz, Oct. 13.—Continued presence of warships at Vera Cruz is creating fresh opposition at the capital.

West Texas—Fair Tuesday; Wednesday fair, cooler in north portion.

HOBSON-UNDERWOOD ROW ON HOUSE FLOOR

ATTEMPT TO QUASH

UNDERGROUND OFFICIALS FIGHT ON TECHNICALITIES IN INDICTMENT.

Fort Worth Judge, However, Indicates McCormick and George Will Have to Face Trial.

Fort Worth, Oct. 13.—An effort to quash the indictments against W. J. George and Charles McCormick, former officials of the Underground Construction company, on the ground that there is no such punishable offense in Texas as conspiracy to swindle, was made by attorneys for the defendants in Judge Swayne's court this morning.

The Underground company originally had the contract to build Fort Worth's million-dollar reservoir. The indictment grew out of this work.

The motion is based on the contention that the legislature of 1884, in amending the original conspiracy law, so as to include swindling, failed to amend the penalty clause and that no penalty exists.

Another ground upon which the indictment was attacked was that in one place the charge is made that the swindle was proposed for the benefit of McCormick, George and the Underground Construction company and that in another place it is charged to be for the benefit of the company alone.

Another Objection.

Objection was made also that the indictment charges an attempt to deceive officers of the city by false estimates and that the indictment ought to put the defendants upon notice as to what officers are meant, or that the indictment should charge attempt to deceive the city itself.

Before noon adjournment Judge Swayne indicated that in the absence of additional argument or decisions, he was inclined to hold that conspiracy to swindle is a punishable offense. He suggested that the latter codification of the law into a penal code made good the failure to provide penalty in 1884.

Codification Not Enactment?

Counsel announced objection to that position on the ground that a codification is not an enactment within the meaning of the law.

Judge Swayne indicated further that he did not propose to let a mere technicality stand in the way of an indictment.

There is enough in an indictment to show what the charge is, that ought to be enough," he said. "Most indictments are ten times too long."

Actual Agents Not Specified.

Judge Swayne also indicated that he did not consider it material that the actual agents be specified.

Attorney Young asserted that "Suppose Stange knew he could get no money by it, that the city could lose no money?"

Judge Swayne replied: "Suppose there was a conspiracy to commit burglary and the conspirators were arrested. Whether or not the protest of the United States against injuring the deputies will be followed by any drastic action should Huerta defy warnings and punish the deputies in one of the questions being discussed by those who are shaping the administration's policy."

May Involve Trammell.

If Judge Swayne quashes it on the first ground that there is no such punishable offense, the indictment against J. D. Trammell, chairman of the board of engineers, also would be quashed.

AVIATOR JEWELL IS MISSING

Starts in Machine to Take Part in Races and Has Never Been Reported.

New York, Oct. 13.—One of the aviators who was to have taken part in the aeroplane race around Manhattan Island today is missing tonight. He is Albert J. Jewell. He left Hempstead Plains, L. I., at 7:40 o'clock this morning for Staten Island, driving a motor car in which he intended to fly in the race. Since then nothing has been heard from him.

Some of the aviators are of the opinion that Jewell, caught in the gale that was blowing, may have been carried over an hour's duration. He has expressed the belief that he landed at some out of the way point in Long Island and has simply neglected to report his whereabouts.

Jewell is 27 years old and has a wife and family living on Staten Island. It is said he came here from California. He received his license from the Aero club six months ago, taking the name, Sidney Jordan. The longest flight he ever took is said to have been something over an hour's duration. He has never done any cross-country flying nor made any trips across the water.

Wireless messages have been sent to steamships at sea to watch for Jewell.

ALABAMA REPRESENTATIVES IN BITTER DEBATE OVER SENATORIAL CONTEST.

BOTH ARE CANDIDATES

HOBSON MAKES CHARGES AND LEADER DEFENDS.

SAYS IS TOOL OF WALL STREET

"Father of Tariff" Reviews His 18 Years of Service and Goes Over Record in Party.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Representative Richmond Pearson Hobson of Alabama and his colleague, Majority Leader Underwood, engaged in a bitter debate on the floor of the house today over the senatorial contest in their state in which they are rival candidates. The oratorical duel was precipitated by Mr. Hobson reiterating utterances he made last week in a speech at Weotufka, Ala., intimating that Mr. Underwood "was the tool of Wall street and the liquor interests," and charging that he had gained Alabama's support in the last presidential campaign under false pretenses.

Cheers from democrats and republicans greeted Mr. Underwood as he rose to reply and later, when Mr. Hobson tried to interrupt, there were loud cries of "Sit down, sit down; you've had your time."

The climax of the dramatic scene, when the majority leader, facing about in his place, said:

"Is there any other man in this chamber who believes the charge that I am or ever have been the tool of Wall street?"

He was answered by shouts of "No, no!" from both sides of the house.

Speaking to a question of personal privilege in answer to a charge of "absenteeism," made against him last week by Representative Donovan of Connecticut, Mr. Underwood devoted an hour to an explanation of his record in congress. Then he declared that in the campaign for the senate the Alabama party leaders had looked for a man to beat him and that the liquor interests were behind every effort to beat him politically. Discussing his recent speech and the comment since then that he was a supporter of Underwood for the democratic presidential nomination, Representative Hobson asserted he did not know at that time that Thomas Fortune Ryan had contributed $35,000 to the Underwood campaign and that the people of Alabama did not know it.

Mr. Underwood declared when he took the floor that he had not wanted to be a candidate for president; that he had consented upon the basis that he should remain at his place in the house framing a tariff law upon which the party could base its campaign, and that he had nothing to do with the management of it, that being undertaken by Senator Bankhead. Later he said he learned that Mr. Ryan had contributed to his campaign, solely because he was a known name and he suggested that Mr. Hobson did not assume Theodore Roosevelt or President Wilson of being tools of the interests because of wealth contributed to their campaigns.

Underwood Asks Exact Charges.

When challenged by Mr. Underwood as to his charge that Hobson was a "dummy" used by his managers in the interest of Wall street and that "if you were a dummy when you could be used by the liquor interests or any other interests,"

"I said to the people of Alabama," he said, "that the gentleman (Mr. Underwood) is simply the type of politician that has reigned but is to be de-throned; a type that plays the game and allows to come into the game agencies that help to win. Without reflection upon his moral integrity or his character, I make that statement."

Hobson referred the conference to the tariff bill which struck the Patterson amendment requiring the full revenue tax on brandies used in fortifying wines. He charged that in agreeing to let Underwood conduct the fight to let $10,000,000 into the "treasury of the liquor interests."

"No man and no interest," however, great or important," he declared, "has ever used me as a tool or a dummy. I have just returned to the house a great trust placed in my hands that in years gone by has been subject to those influences referred to here and yet I challenge the gentleman from Alabama or any other man here to show that any influence has been used in my administration of that trust."

Answers Charge of Favoring Liquor Interests.

Answering the charge that he was favorable to the liquor interests, Mr.

Walter S. Shook Killed On Streets of Temple

Temple, Oct. 13.—Walter S. Shook, who conducted a rooming house and family hotel in this city, known as the Park Hotel, was shot to death this morning on a prominent corner of a crowded business street, where he unexpectedly met his slayer face to face. The men exchanged a few words and bystanders say that Shook pleaded not to be killed, but all to no avail, as a number of shots were immediately fired, after which Shook was found lying on the pavement in a dying condition, five shots from an automatic .38-caliber revolver having entered his body, any one of which was sufficient to have produced death.

He expired in a few minutes. Several hundred people were in the immediate vicinity of the shooting and it was all over before anyone knew what was impending or steps could be taken to separate the men. The body was removed to a local undertaker's and prepared for burial. The dead man was about forty years of age and came here from Coleman about two years ago. Prior to that time he conducted a barber shop at Oronville. He had been operating the rooming house here for a period of about two months. New Orleans, Oct. 13.—The steamship Momus of the Southern Pacific line, bound from New York for New Orleans, ran aground to the entrance to the Mississippi river this morning.

The steamship Chalmette is standing by and a tug has been sent from New Orleans. Southern Pacific officials say the 133 first cabin and 35 second cabin passengers are in no danger.

Underwood told of how he had supported and voted at the last session for the anti-liquor bill which the liquor interests did all in their power to kill.

"I have always sought to do my duty conscientiously," he continued. "There is no record in my eighteen years of service of a record vote being dodged by me.

"If I have been the tool of Wall street or the liquor interests, then the democratic party has because my record is the record of the democratic party in eighteen years of service."

Mr. Underwood said that the people of the southern states who supported him at Baltimore would not have been ashamed if he had been nominated or elected.

"It was not a campaign contribution they were supporting," he declared.

The row veered to the pre-convention differences between Mr. Underwood and Mr. Bryan and in old editorial in which Mr. Bryan referred to Underwood as a "Wall street candidate."

"Everyone knows that at one time there was a difference between Mr. Bryan and myself," said Mr. Underwood. "We buried that difference for the benefit of the democratic party. We have forgotten it. I challenge the gentleman from Alabama to get any statement from Mr. Bryan that I am a tool of anyone."

"I will accept that challenge if the gentleman will make it clear," returned Underwood.

"It is very clear," started Underwood, shaking his fistfinger at Underwood. "And what I mean is well understood. Mr. Bryan knows I have done my duty here; that I have served my country to the best of my ability; as a truthful and God-fearing man he would not make such a charge as the gentleman from Alabama indicates at the behest of anybody."

"Mr. Wilson certainly knew about his campaign contributions and spurned the one Bryan made," interrupted Underwood. "Many who contributed to Underwood were as close to Wall street, returned Underwood.

Underwood then went into Hobson's record. He said he did not question Hobson's motives nor challenge his integrity but pointed out that he had exposed free lumber in the 1905 tariff fight and had always supported the propaganda of the great ship building interests.

"I could as well charge that he is the tool of the ship building interests as he can charge that I am a tool of any interest," shouted Underwood.

When Mr. Underwood concluded the house cheered him loudly and the row ended.

DEBATE CHANGE OF CHURCH NAME

LOW CHURCH CLAIMS OPENING

Say Committee Has Power to Change Name—Hold Protestant Character Necessary.

New York, Oct. 13.—The suggestion that the corporate name of the Protestant Episcopal church be changed to the American Catholic church precipitated a long debate today at the general convention of the church. At the instance of the high church delegates, it was voted by the house of delegates to appoint a committee to revise the prayer book, but before this resolution was reached the low church delegates had succeeded in having restricting amendments made to the resolution that authorized appointment of the committee. It was openly declared by low church delegates that the resolution introduced by the high church members left the way clear for the committee to decide for the whole house of deputies that the church name should be changed. The amendments made it impossible for the commission to take such action if it desired to do so.

The resolution to "revise and enrich" the book of common prayer was offered by the diocese of California and the missionary district of Arizona, which asked that a commission of seven bishops, seven presbyters and seven laymen consider the matter and report at the next triennial convention.

Goodwin Offers Amendment.
"Provided that no proposition involving the faith and doctrine of the church shall be considered or reported upon by the commission."

Dr. Leighton Parks of New York, while speaking of the apparent effort being made to change the name of the church, was hissed. "Well, some of us believe," he said, "that if you take away the protestant character of this church you rob it of a great treasure. This issue on the change of name has been unexpectedly precipitated in this house, and it is in the interest of the church that it be settled as early as possible."

Dr. Parks cited resolutions previously passed, one making it necessary to have a two-thirds vote instead of a majority to decide upon a change of name, and the other providing a revised representation to the house of deputies. "Until these resolutions had been decided," he said, "no action should be taken that would not express the fair minded wish of the people of the church."

Dr. Goodwin's amendment was carried by a majority. Several delegates resented the "inference" that the high church would attempt through the original resolution to change the name of the church.

Judge James McConnell of New Orleans declared that Dr. Goodwin's amendment was so broad in scope that it still left the way open for the commission to make a decision on the change of name that would stand for the whole house. The house then reconsidered the McKim resolution. It had voted down and proceeded to pass the resolution with both amendments.

MISS PANKHURST BESTS POLICE

Officers Raid Meeting She Is Addressing and Battle With Chairs Follows.

London, Oct. 13.—After a fierce struggle the police arrested Miss Sylvia Pankhurst at Bow News, in the east end of London tonight, where she was making a speech. But when they got her outside the building with the intention of placing her in a taxicab and rushing her to Holloway jail, the militants attacked the police so savagely that they had to let her go and she escaped.

Miss Pankhurst, who has an uncompromising term of imprisonment to serve, was not recognized until she threw aside the disguise which enabled her to elude the police and enter the building. She was warmly applauded as she stepped on the platform, but had been speaking only a few minutes when detectives, accompanied by a body of uniformed police with drawn truncheons, entered the hall and made a rush for the platform.

The audience arose and chairs began to fly. The invaders beat the police point. Some of the people in the galleries even dropped benches on their heads. The police gained the platform and for some minutes a desperate battle waged, the officers using their clubs freely and those on the platform using chairs as weapons.

The police succeeded in dragging Miss Pankhurst down to the floor, while reinforcements cleared the hall.

Outside the struggle was renewed with greater freedom.

Men and women were thrown down and trampled upon. Concentrating the attack on the police who had the militant leader in their grasp, the women, with the assistance of several men, succeeded in tearing her away from their grasp and she slipped away.

Some of the women afterward complained of having been thrown down and kicked by the police, and men after the fracas were seen nursing bruises.

Miss Zelle Emerson of Jackson, Mich., whose imprisonment caused such a furore several months ago, was one of those injured.

Miss Lee, who presided at the meeting, and took a conspicuous part in the attack on the police, was arrested.

Miss Pankhurst later announced her intention to address a meeting at Poplar town hall tomorrow night.

Bomb Explosion in New York.
New York, Oct. 13.—Despite the recent round-up of Italians suspected of responsibility for most of the bomb outrages committed in New York, the east side was disturbed today by one of the most terrific bomb explosions in years. Every pane of glass throughout an entire block was shattered. The grocery store of Candelio Gatto was wrecked. Gatto had received several blackhand letters recently. The blast drove 250 persons from their homes.

Experiments With Remarkable New Substance Being Shown in Waco.

One of the interesting features of the volcanic strata that crops up at one place in Texas is that the liquid taken out of it can not be mixed with alcohol or any known drug. This liquid is Vitalitas. Nature has so made it that nothing can be mixed with it. No opiate, narcotic or drug ingredient will blend with it. It defies the chemists in this respect. Nature has made it free of any harmful ingredient and alive with vitalizing and curative forces.

While scientists only recently discovered this remarkable strata, there are reasons to believe it has been known for ages. The spot was a gathering place for that ancient race, the Moundbuilders. Later Indians came long distances to it and their sick and crippled were cured. This earth strata was their great medicine. For seventy-five years Texas people used it in a crude manner and it cured their stomach trouble, liver and kidney ills.

Only recently were steps taken by science to prepare it for widespread public use and since then its fame has traveled like wildfire throughout America.

MERCHANT-FARMER OF MARLIN PASSES AWAY IN THIS CITY.

Death Follows an Operation at Providence Sanitarium—Funeral in Waco This Afternoon.

Mose Levy, aged about 55 years, a resident of Marlin, died at Providence sanitarium last night at 8:45 o'clock, following an operation during the forenoon for throat trouble.

Mr. Levy is one of the most prominent citizens of Falls county. He was a native of Russia, and as a boy came to America. In 1870 he located in Marlin, and during the years that have followed he has become one of the most substantial citizens, as well as one of the best liked by those among whom he lived. He was engaged in the general merchandise business, and year after year as his interests increased in worth, he added to his holdings by wise investments, becoming a large owner of farming property in the county. He was a large stockholder in the First state bank of Marlin, and served on its directors. He is a stockholder also in the Central Texas Exchange National bank of this city. He was a man of many charities, but modest in what he did. His character was such that he commanded a wide influence among the people who knew him.

Mr. Levy has had an affection of the throat which gave him some trouble, and Sunday he came to this city accompanied by his wife and by Mr. and Mrs. Mose Levi. Mr. Levi being a brother of Mrs. Levy. Yesterday morning at the Providence sanitarium he underwent an operation and his death resulted therefrom.

Mr. Levy is survived by his wife, and five children, two girls, Misses Isidore and Cecile, and three boys, Nathan, Lester and Robert, and his brother, Marx Levy, also of Marlin.

As soon as his death was announced Rabbi I. Warsaw, Louis Migel, Joe Haber, Asher Sanger and other friends of the family in this city went to the State House where Mrs. Levy and Mr. and Mrs. Levi have apartments, to extend condolence and to assist the family in any way possible in the arrangements for the burial.

The services will be held this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The body will lie at the chapel of I. C. Puckett, undertaker, until that hour, and the funeral will take place from there, burial being in Hebrew Rest in this city.

Kiev, Oct. 13.—The strife court trying Mendel Reiss, accused of the murder of Andrew Yushinsky, was transferred temporarily today to the cave in which the boy's body was found.

The first witness was Joe Jansky, a publican, who testified that he heard Yushinsky's aunt, Natalie, who has since died from tuberculosis, say: "His own people killed him." This remark, according to the witness, was made before the arrival of the authorities at the cave and before the character of the wounds on the boy's body had been ascertained. Joe Jansky asserted his uncle, Theodore Nelinsky, had visited a cafe on April 1, ten days after the crime when he seemed excited. His overcoat was splashed with clay. A boy gave evidence that he had brushed and cleaned Nelinsky's coat on that day.

Here is what you must write about: We are going to introduce a new spectacle and eyeglass lens at this year's exposition. The name of these glasses is called "Eytomic Lenses." The wonderful advantage these lenses have over the old style is that they exclude all the chemical and heat rays without distorting the vision. No smoke, amber or yellow colors to cloud the sight; they soothe the eye and soften impaired vision, exclude all ultra violet rays, which are so injurious to defective eyes. They correct the refractive errors and remove nervous conditions. They are so soothing and restful that they have been called, and rightly so, "Eytomic Lenses."

In writing your ad about these lenses you must bring out all the above features and mention our booth that we will occupy at the Cotton Palace. Ads must not contain less than 100 nor more than 250 words; but you can write as many ads as you like.

MIXED ADMIRATION AND GRIEF.

During the course of the late unpleasantness—for Gotham—a writer in Cincinnati Times-Star produced this bewail to Mr. Baker:

"Some men have the knack, or shall we say genius? of being on hand at the right time, changing the destinies of causes, and making history. In this category we should place Blucher at Waterloo, Sheridan at Winchester, and J. Franklin Baker at New York. And with our perspective somewhat affected by the glamor of the present, it appears to us that Mr. Baker's feat may not be the least of these. Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war.

"There is only one objection to Mr. Baker. He and his hat are overdoing it. By reaffirming his prowess he is taking the edge of dramatic surprise from this thing of lifting a ball into the stand during a close game. Twice did it happen in 1911, with the result that a world championship pennant floated over the Athletics' park. On Tuesday it was 'Home Run' Baker who again decided the battle. The public has been taught that it is a habit with the Athletics' third baseman. But baseball is a game of quick changes and fickle fans. Let J. Franklin Baker beware. The fate of the Mighty Casey may await him."

This Cincinnati-wise "pickler" in a city that cannot remember when its own live team strove for the biggest bunting of the game—could not withhold even reluctant tribute to the swat of the mighty, but neither could he forget what happened to him for wakening on the Giants to take the opener or—possibly—the series. His gloomy advice is premature. Mr. Baker is giving never the least sign that two world's pennant seasons of homering are withering, or many long clouds stalling. His infinite variety of "breaking up" the game.

NEW USES FOR PETROLEUM.

It was hardly a dozen years ago that oil burning locomotives and stationary engines began coming into general use in certain parts of the United States, the innovation receiving a strong initial impulse from efforts that were being made to find new uses for the output of the rapidly developing fields in California and the middle Southwest. It was a striking case of increase of appetite growing by what it fed on; for, principally because of its high efficiency and the ease with which it could be handled, crude petroleum began replacing coal in steam engines of all descriptions at greater and greater distances from its point of production.

Before long it became evident that the fireman who remarked that "oil was better'n coal for ev'ry thing but to pick up in lumps an' fling at the heads of the cops when a strike was on," was speaking pretty near the literal truth, says the Review of Reviews. Nor was the astute stokers' objection one which told heavily when the question of the merits of the two fuels came up for debate at a board meeting. It also became clear that the extent to which oil would replace coal was sub-

The New Charter Is For All Waco

The Waco Morning News now has presented to the voters, and all other interested residents of Waco, a complete draft of the new charter written by the subcommittee of the general committee of citizens representing all interests—business, the professions, labor, the press, clubs and commercial organizations.

The general committee is studying the work of the subcommittee and is discussing amendments to that work. This newspaper earnestly recommends that the general committee will not let the fact that any concern of all the city was fully discussed by the subcommittee and worked into this document under consideration, detract from the general committee's further full, frank and free analysis of the merits of the proposed provision for the handling of that concern. If the general committee does hesitate to discuss and amend, merely because the subcommittee has worked on the particular phase of city government under discussion, it will not be doing its whole duty to the people. The new charter is for all Waco.

The Morning News will endeavor to lessen the voters' difficulty in considering and voting on so large and so important a mass of legislation. It hopes there will be a way for the voter to ballot against one proposition and for another, that he need not accept or reject the proposed new charter submitted to him, as a whole. So the Morning News will discuss the more important features of the new code for Waco, the really essential features of municipal government—the change in these as compared with the old charter—and express its approval or disapproval of the change.

Meanwhile, let the general committee do thoroughly its work of study and revision (if it considers revision necessary in the interests of all the people of all the city) of the document prepared by Chairman McCollum and his colleagues of the subcommittee. The general committee is bound to the citizens in its duty, not to the subcommittee. There is no question of "courtesy" involved in this wise.

The News' examination of the new document thus far has led it to at least one conclusion: The committee must not frame the new charter, in point of duties and qualifications of city employees, from mayor down, in rank, with an eye to the qualifications and records of incumbents of city office. In plain terms, the committee ject only to the limiting factors of distance and maintenance of supply; that whenever a manufacturing plant, or the locomotives of a section of railway, could be operated anywhere nearly as cheaply burning oil as with coal, that the liquid fuel would always be given the preference. Through better storage facilities, the extension of pipe lines, and the employment of tank trains and steamers, the "oil zone"—the territory in which the use of oil is economically preferable to that of coal—is being extended farther and farther from the fields which produce it and nearer and nearer to the coal-mining centers. The supremacy of oil in its ever-broadening sphere is now so well established that nothing except a falling off of the supply could cause it to give ground, and this contingency, thanks to the incalculable promise of the North American fields—especially those of Mexico and California—is not one that need be considered for many decades to come.

Upon what meat hath these Caesars fed that they should sit in their sanctum sanctorum and pronounce unholily anathemas upon the unworthiness of any candidate for office who does not subscribe to their political dictums? A little member of the little company of candidates for the great governorship of grand Texas.

Probably upon meat as rank, little man, in its way as the pattern you have chosen for the construction of your candid statements. You say you will bring a message more powerful than any that has been heard in Texas since the advent of the lamented Hogz. You will have to, if you expect the people to give heed. For you cannot be elected to this office merely on your remarkable use of English. "Sanctum sanctorum" and "dictum" will not land you in the lower southeast office of the Statehouse. Heaven help our "free" school system.

UNIVERSITY'S ARGUMENT FOR INTENSIVE FARMING.

President Edmund James of the University of Illinois, announces that the trustees of the university have purchased an estate of three hundred and twenty acres for the purpose of enlarging and developing the horticultural interests of the State represented in the university.

This will make provision for horticulture in its large sense, including forestry, which will be second to none in the United States and will surpass considerably any similar work done abroad, under the charge of any single institution.

It is perfectly apparent that with must not fix qualifications for, say, an inspector, with the personality of John Doe, the present inspector, in mind—having in mind, too, that Doe may desire to continue in this public office.

The offices of our city government belong to all the people, all the voters. The charter committee must set as high a standard of qualifications for the holder of every office as is consistent with the duties of the office, the public need and the salary paid. This charter is being prepared for the benefit of no man or set of men in Waco, no politician or set of politicians or political machine. If John Doe, who holds office now, wants to continue to hold office, he must meet the requirements set by the charter committee and approved by the people.

Public service corporations in Waco are realizing seriously their mistake in building their enterprises only against a limited growth in population and extent of residence and business districts and for a very limited term of years. Let our charter committee make no such detrimental error. Let it present a charter befitting the growth of 25 or 50 years, of this city—a growth that the city's record of the five years past removes from the realm of prediction into the category of certainties. Let Waco have a capable system of government, an adequate system for all its people and all its concerns, and capable public servants for the stewardship of these concerns.

It is right and proper that the mayor and commissioners should confer with the charter committee and counsel it on the several matters of change in the proposed code. The mayor and commissioners have been invited to do this. Some of them know, and all are supposed to know, the conditions that should be treated in this document. But let no holder of city office other than these city "fathers"—no member of the public payroll—go about electioneering against any phase of the charter that affects the office he holds, if this provision has the approval of the general committee and is presented to the people.

For this new charter is for all Waco. It is not being worked out to suit the needs or ambitions or plans of any man or any "class."

Let the voters of Waco, and their public servants, be thus advised of the scope of this plan for the benefit of the city.

the rising price of farm lands in Illinois, and the Middle West in general, a new system of culture must be introduced to make them profitable to their owners and the people of the nation in general. More intensive methods of cultivation must be adopted. The systematic cultivation of forest trees, the adequate development of the whole department of floriculture, which has become one of the great industries of the State of Illinois and the fuller development of fruit growing and market gardening, call for more systematic and comprehensive attention to the subject than they have ever before received in the State of Illinois, and the provision of this added space will permit the University of Illinois to undertake the development of this interest on an enlarged scale. Scientific and practical horticulturists are fully convinced that Illinois, taken as a whole, offers as good prospects for fruit growing—as apples, peaches, pears, cherries, etc.—as can be found in any State in the Union, not even excepting the most favored region on the Pacific coast; while opportunities for market gardening and floriculture are, of course, absolutely inexhaustible.

President James sees in the development of these interests one of the most important make-weights against the ever increasing cost of living. The College of Agriculture will be enabled by this latest addition to the resources of the university to do for Illinois, through its field of horticulture in the large sense, what has been done in similar fields in other States by the most advanced experiment station work.

Special opportunities will be provided in the curriculum of the College of Agriculture for acquiring a practical and scientific training in all departments of so-called intensive agriculture, small farming, floriculture, market gardening, fruit raising, etc., etc., all lines which do not require large capital in order to organize and develop a lucrative business and all lines in which women may succeed as well as, or even better than men.

TRAINING HOME MAKERS.

The federal bureau of education is giving attention to the homecraft course just instituted in the Wadleigh high school, New York City, in which, it considers, the attempt to meet practical demands in girls' education is seen at its best. The homecraft course is for girls whose interest is in up-to-date home-making rather than in advanced literary or scientific study.

The work is taken chiefly by students who do not intend to go to college, but who wish to make the best use of their time while in high school; and it is particularly recommended for those who expect to stay in school only two years or less.

The bureau says the course is both "practical" and "cultural." It answers the everyday needs of girls who mean to be real home-keepers and it affords abundant opportunity for studies that are for enjoyment as well as for work. Domestic science and domestic art, with household arithmetic, study of vocations, "clothing—its care and remodeling," are prominent subjects the first year. Drawing, music, biology, English and physical training are required subjects, with current history, English history, and modern languages among the electives. Latin and advanced mathematics are conspicuous by their absence.

In the second year hygiene and sanitation are added to the requirements, and other studies may be chosen from a list which includes millinery, household chemistry, European and American history, history of women's work, arts and crafts, and modern languages.

Household management, a required study, is a feature of the third year of the course. Applied design and applied physics are among the subjects that may be selected by the students. In the fourth year the girls delve a little deeper into the philosophy of homecraft by means of a required course on social efficiency. They may also regale themselves with a number of more advanced studies, such as: Fundamentals of legal procedure; physiology, bacteriology and sanitation; household design and decoration.

Throughout the course the emphasis is an applied, rather than theoretical knowledge; and the work is so arranged that regardless of whether a girl completes the four-year course or leaves before she finishes, she has acquired a fund of workable ideas of direct value to her in the immediate problems of her life. At the same time the course is not narrowing. Girls who take it may, if they desire, elect some of the more usual studies from the regular high-school courses. Furthermore, they are prepared to meet the admission requirements of the Columbia University School of Household Arts and similar higher institutions for young women.

A Righteous Role.

If Mayor Woodruff wants to put them (the police) on the right track he will go after all the loafers and stop some of the street corner ogling which goes on in the town—Austin Statesman.

"Excellent, well said." Let not our own Lord Mayor, the worshipful James H. Mackey, eschew as beneath his dignity the part of an anti-loaferist and anti-oglist. We have spoken of this so often we need now say little. Every mayor should strive mightily for the improvement of his burgh. Loafers and ogleries streets are a distinct public improvement and—indulge us the iteration, since we desire our preachment shall sometime be rewarded with percolation—the mayor's duty runs to public improvement. And, your honor, duty done is honor won. Relieve us of the street corner crew, your honor.

The late Hon. Timothy L. Woodruff a year ago quitted the Republican party, in which he had been a power and from which he had received honors of high office through thirty years of its control in New York State. He joined the ranks of the progressives and his action was heralded with delight by the new party, as Woodruff was accounted a man of might in the arena of election-winning. At a time when good citizens of every party, in New York, are not chary of expressing regret that the last election did not return Mr. Straus to the executive office and thus have obviated the nasty scandal and reproach to the State that now surrounds the governorship, the loss of a leader of the progressive party will be genuinely regretted. For this party looks for a victory for its next candidate for the governorship if it puts forward a man of Straus's calibre, because of this indictment of the controlling factors in the old parties and their methods of running the government at Albany.

"Washington—Those officials who commented on the arrest of the Mexican deputies informally, decided the American government probably would take no steps for several days, being content to play the role of observer." From which may be gleaned the gratifying intelligence that the government's attitude toward the Mexican situation is one of contentment, not paralysis.

If the Hon. W. P. Lane will enlighten us as to how that proposal can be both a "smooth political scheme" and an "Utopian dream" we will consent to overlook 19 other inconsistencies, if not outrages, of rhetoric, in that remarkable reiteration of his that he will not "fail" for or into a pro, elimination performance.

Texas Viewpoints.

Bring On the Intellectual Titan!

Fort Worth Star-Telegram thus introduces an able discussion of "A Need of Texas Cities": Lawyers are so expert at devising ways through seemingly impregnable legal barriers that there should be some Moses to be found who will lead the cities of Texas into a way to make sidewalks compulsory where they are badly needed. We doubt if even a Moses could achieve this business, or a mere lawyer. Moses's people indulged an occasional rebellion against his method of leading them to the promised land. How much greater would be the resentment against one who contrived to make T. Wad, citizen, spend money for that from which he could see no prospect of immediate gain. Let it be argued never so strongly that a city lifted from the mud is a land of promise for its property owners—Mr. T. Wad sees only the check drawn for the concrete man overhauling the fact that he could sell or rent his house, possibly, without this expense. A man who can devise a way to make a forced sidewalk appear where there was no optional sidewalk before must, indeed, possess the patience of Job, the perseverance of Moses, the constructive legal acumen of Justinian, the fearlessness of Richard and the popularity stand-in of wise Pericles. If he can provide that the city be enabled to build sidewalks where owners will not, and make the cost of these walks a tax on the property, the city should change its name and adopt his name as an honor much less than he deserves.

A Big Newspaper From Mexico.

Mexia and Limestone county must have sat erect and given attention when the Mexia Weekly Herald put forth that special edition of October 9. The work of Major Houx, editor, and of Miss Mild J. Allen and others who contributed to its scores of pages of laudatory and informative matter concerning the history, business, industry and people of that region, may be highly commended. We are glad to see that section so well represented and featured in an edition that makes an excellent appearance and is wholly worth reading.

Don't Overlook the News Columns.

Houston Post Bailey bit: "Are the wires down or has the pursuit of the Money Devil suspended? Where is Our Bob, anyway?" Your Bob is in Tyler, opening the East Texas Fair, which fact doubtless will be well played up in your correspondence for the gladdening of your present circulation in that region and the possible adding of more. Policy should as much prompt attention to Mr. Henry's peaceful pursuits that concern the State's citizens as prejudice prompts gibes at his less peaceful efforts to purge the Temple of Government of the people's enemies.

So There!

"We don't run this paper to suit everybody, and we don't intend to." (Eagle Pass Guide's defiance). "If you did it would be necessary to change the name to 'The Heavenly Harp.'" (San Antonio Express's surmise). Not so. There is wide difference of opinion even on the question of whether harps or lyres (please be very careful to follow copy) or lutes or silver horns are the popular instruments above—or whether there are any instruments at all. The Express suggests a name that would in itself start a controversy from those who can start a controversy about anything connected with a newspaper. "The Sunday School Seraph" would be about the only name that would fit. We cannot believe any man would be small enough to start something with a Sunday School sheet, for that certainly is "run" to suit all its readers and all its readers must run themselves to suit the sheet.

Pro Bone Publico.

"Mayes," says Grand Saline Sun, "Mayes has made good both as lieutenant governor and as chief executive in the absence of Governor Colquitt and he will be very much in the race with the other aspirants for gubernatorial honors." Remembering all the personnel of the to-date aspirant company, we may only say that we hope so.

HEROIC EFFORTS MADE TO SAVE

reached the German liner's side only to be dashed to pieces. Its occupants managed to seize lines thrown out and thus were saved. With a lurid glare the flames burst through another part of the Voltorno. Captain Inch sent a last despairing appeal and twenty minutes later there occurred a terrific explosion, which, to the helpless thousands of spectators on board the surrounding vessels, seemed to seal the doom of those on the stricken ship. After describing the rescue of the German, Walter Trintepohl, the only survivor taken on board the Carmania, the bulletin says the hope of saving any more of those on board the Voltorno had been almost abandoned when the sea suddenly moderated and the fleet of rescuing ships was able to get away a number of life boats and take off all the survivors.

Captain Inch left his vessel at 8 o'clock on Friday morning, carrying with him all the ship's papers.

Oil Steamer Responds.

"I will be up with me milk in the morning," was the cheerful reply radiographed by Commander Harwood of the Anglo-American oil steamer Narragansett, to the Carmania's call for help. As soon as Captain Inch of the Cunard steamer realized the situation he told his Marconi operator to get in touch with the oil steamer as an abundant supply of oil seemed to be the only means of saving the lives of the crew and of facilitating the rescue operations. The Carmania quickly picked up the oil ship and received the hearty response.

True to his word the skipper of the Narragansett brought his steamer on to the scene early Friday morning and immediately sluiced hundreds of tons of oil onto the waves. Humphrey Jones, a passenger on the Carmania, described the scene as the vessel and the international fleet worked splendidly and with the regularity of a naval review. The Grosser Kurfuerst, the Kronland and the Czar did wonderfully well.

The spectacle of the burning ship in the middle of a ring of vessels impotent to help, he said, "was too terrible to describe. But for the subsiding of the storm all on board the Voltorno must assuredly have been lost."

Carmania to Rescue.

First intimation received by the passengers of the Carmania that anything unusual had happened was while they were at breakfast on Thursday when the continuous breaking of green seas on the decks above them and the plunging of the vessel indicated that the Carmania's course had been changed and that she was speeding in the face of the gale. Immediately on receipt of the "S. O. S." signal Captain Barr double-manned the stoke holes and the Carmania was soon traveling at speed as she had seldom attained since her trial trip.

The first life boat launched by the Carmania after she arrived near the Voltorno fought the seas for three and a half hours. According to spectators, only the use of sea anchors and the magnificent seamanship of First Officer Gardiner saved the craft and its crew from destruction. As the senior officer present, Captain Barr took command of the rescue operations. He directed the smaller vessels to stand close in as they ran less risk than the Carmania. He rigged a searchlight and kept the whole scene illuminated. As many as possible of the survivors were placed on westbound vessels.

A wireless dispatch from the operator on La Touraine says that when the vessel arrived five steamers were making unsuccessful attempts to take off the Voltorno's passengers and crew. The sea was then moderating and two of La Touraine's boats were launched and got alongside the sinking steamer. Each boat came back full of passengers.

During the night officers of La Touraine reported many of the Voltorno's passengers were drowned through jumping into the sea while others jumped into the boats and injured themselves. La Touraine saved thirty-nine passengers and three of the crew.

Carmania Passenger's Story.

Mr. Mansfield of New York, a passenger on the Carmania, said: "The people on board the Voltorno seemed to be paralyzed and helpless. They made no effort to grab the lines of the rafts thrown to them. I saw one man kiss his wife and children and throw them overboard. He jumped after them. They were seen only a moment and then disappeared together. The fire is believed to have started in cotton seed oil."

T. W. Butler of New York, describing how the passengers were saved, said the ropes were cast from the life boats to the Voltorno and the passengers were made fast to these and swung overboard. He continued: "The passengers of the Voltorno were all wearing life belts and seemed to be quiet. I saw two boats floating bottom up."

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—T. T. Watson of Philadelphia, member of the passenger list of the Carmania, said the chief credit for saving those on the Voltorno was undoubtedly due to the oil ship Narragansett.

"Only a few good swimmers," he declared, "would have survived from the ill fated ship had not the Narragansett made free use of oil to calm the terrible waves."

"When the Carmania arrived Captain Barr recognized at once that it would be almost a hopeless task to attempt to save the Voltorno's human cargo without the use of oil, but with a daring amounting seemingly to foolhardiness, he instructed First Officer Gardiner to lower a small boat. This after terrible buffeting regained the Carmania with only three oars intact. After this miraculous escape Captain Barr did not again attempt to launch a single boat. Hence, our ship saved only one passenger, who came to her."

Captain Barr Directs.

"On account of the size of the ship's turbine engines, which made fine maneuvering impossible, Captain Barr stood off and directed operations, acting in effect as commander of the great fleet which gathered about the stricken Voltorno. Shortly after we arrived the Carmania tried both fore and aft oil sprays, but without effect on the mountainous waters."

The captain sent out wireless calls in all directions for an oil ship and his efforts were rewarded by an answer from the Narragansett.

"When the Narragansett arrived, the Grosser Kurfuerst with other liners got in as close as possible and threw life boats. These took aboard several persons who had jumped from the Voltorno and the work was greatly facilitated by the steam pinnace of the Grosser Kurfuerst, which stayed out all night. As soon as the Narragansett began to spray oil about the doomed ship the waves subsided as if by magic. Soon small boats were enabled to run alongside the liner and the various steamers without trouble. We then craned out for two hours searching for the life boats which were said to have escaped the destruction that the other boats had suffered against the side of their own ship, but found only the air tanks which were carried beneath the decks. I do not believe that there is any possibility of the two boats having escaped awamping."

Carmania Finds Voltorno Burning.

When we arrived on the scene the Grosser Kurfuerst was burning steadily, but fiercely. It never at any time got off of the bridge. When we went to dinner at 7 o'clock in the evening there were no flames; nothing but thick smoke was burning steadily. At 8 o'clock we were summoned on deck, when the flames broke out again, soon culminating in an explosion. Then we saw for the first time signs of a panic on the decks of the fated vessel. Several jumped

BACKACHE A WARNING YOU SHOULD NEED

It is One of Nature's First Signs of Kidney Trouble, if Neglected, Serious Diseases May Follow.

When the kidneys are clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, when a little Croxone can be gained so quickly and surely and at such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for all such troubles than Croxone, because it reaches the cause. It soaks right into the system, through the walls and linings, cleans out the clogged up pores; neutralizes and dissolves uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies, it is practically impossible to take it without results.

An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to end the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

overboard, among them our own survivor, who made a plucky swim, reached the side of the Carmania, but was too weak to get up the ladder.

"Seaman Helgeway was then lowered with a lifeline through an open cargo port, stripped to the waist. He got beneath the swimmer, whose life-belt had become unfastened, and supported him. It was a magnificent exhibition of strength and courage. Some idea can be gained of how difficult this feat was rendered by the fierceness of the waves when it is realized that half an hour passed from the time the swimmer, Trintepohl, reached the side of the ship before he was gotten aboard."

"The explosion seemed to come from coal gas collected in the bunkers and was evidently not due to the boilers. For some time the fire burned brightly and then gradually died down."

"It is impossible to tell how many of those who jumped overboard were drowned, but the good swimmers among them must have been picked up, as small boats were cruising about."

Arthur Spurgeon, who yesterday sent Trintepohl's graphic story by wireless and described the rescue work around the burning vessel, supplemented his dispatches with additional details today.

"The story of what took place on board the Voltorno before the arrival of the Carmania," he said, "probably will not be known until Captain Inch makes his official report."

"Some say the boats were launched in an orderly manner; others declare that a panic took place, resulting in the turning over of boats by fear-crazed crews after the fire got out of control. It seems to be agreed that there were 120 souls on the boats, all of whom were killed or drowned. The Carmania's passengers were told that not more than one-third of those in the boats were women and children."

Order Received with Cheer.

"When Captain Inch gave the order to launch a life boat it was received with a ringing cheer, but the attempt to rescue failed and as further efforts to get alongside the Voltorno meant certain death to the boat crew, First Officer Gardiner bravely gave the order to turn back."

"After two hours' battling with the sea the boat again came within hail of the Carmania and was almost smashed against the side of its own ship. But finally it was lifted aboard amid cheering."

"Late in the afternoon, after the fleet of rescuing ships had gathered about the doomed ship, the captain of the Voltorno sent a message that the situation was becoming desperate. Attempts were made to send rafts from the Carmania, and these almost reached the burning vessel, but just missed it and thereby was lost the chance to get a raft aboard."

"Shortly afterwards, Captain Inch reported that the upper plates would soon give way. An explosion, which seemed to seal the doom of the ship, followed. In desperation an attempt was made by the Voltorno to send a boat with a line to the Grosser Kurfuerst, but the boat was hurled against the German liner and wrecked. The men were saved."

"The night aboard the Carmania was one of the most desperate. No one got more than snatches of sleep. Secret prayers for the souls in peril. All were kept on their feet."

racked with heart-breaking anxiety. Our utter helplessness was appalling. The first fleet of liners ever gathered on one spot of the Atlantic was practically impotent, even with the boats' splendid equipment, to render aid on account of the great waves.

"Soon after midnight the Grosz Kuerfuerst succeeded in lowering a boat, which had almost as painful an experience as the Carmania's. After getting within speaking distance of the Volturino, the officer in charge of the boat shouted to the passengers to jump. But either they did not hear or were afraid to respond. The people aboard the fireship were in a state of semi-collapse; they were overcome by the sight of the destruction of many of their fellows in the morning. They knew that the fire, the explosion and the rockets stored in the chart-room exploded they thought the end had come. Terror drove them almost mad. It was hell, Trenton said.

"Meanwhile disaster threatened a boat crew from the Minneapolis because of a broken rudder. The searchlight of the Carmania revealed their plight and a boat was sent to their rescue. When brought alongside the Cunarder their boat was smashed against the side, but the officer and crew were saved. They had been out for five hours.

"This time spent in rescuing the Minneapolis boat affected Captain Barr's plan of operation. He had four boats ready to launch, but was now further from the scene. Captain Barr then signalled the other captains that his ship was difficult to maneuver and if they could do the work he would stand aside.

"At daybreak the gale moderated and then a miracle occurred. It resulted in the salvation of the Volturino's crew and passengers. When Captain Barr sent out a call for a tank steamer, there came back a reply from the Narragansett. 'We will be there with the milk—the sea name for oil.

"On the arrival of the tank, huge quantities were pumped around the Volturino, making it safe for the lifeboats to approach. It was a stirring spectacle when the great liners put off their boats, which dived over the shimmering oil-flooded waters to the work of rescue. And soon the Volturino was left a derelict."

Women of Middle Age

From 40 to 50 Woman's Critical Period.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, severe headaches, melancholia, dread of impending evil, palpitation of the heart, irregularity, constipation and dizziness are promptly treated by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life.

This is the most critical period of woman's life and she who neglects the care of her health at this time invites incurable disease and pain. Why not be guided by the experience of others and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It is an indisputable fact that this grand old remedy has helped thousands of women to pass through this trying period with comfort and safety. Thousands of genuine and honest testimonials support this fact.

From Mrs. HENRY HEAVILIN, Cadiz, Ohio.
Fort Worth, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and derived great benefit from its use. It carried me safely through the Change of Life when I was in bad health. I had that all gone feeling most of the time, and headache constantly. I was very nervous and the hot flashes were very bad. I had tried other remedies and doctors, but did not improve until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has now been some time since I took the Compound and I have had no return of my old complaints. I always praise your remedies to weak women."—Mrs. HENRY HEAVILIN, R. F. D. No. 4, Cadiz, Ohio.

From Mrs. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.
Fleetwood, Pa.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong, well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—Mrs. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

From Mrs. F. P. MULLENBORG, Munford, Ala.
Munford, Ala.—"I was so weak and nervous while passing through the Change of Life that I could hardly live. My husband had to nail rubber on all the gates for I could not stand to have a gate slam.

"I also had backache and a fullness in my stomach. I noticed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was advertised for such cases and I sent and got a bottle. It did me so much good that I kept on taking it and found it to be all you claim. I recommend it to all women afflicted as I was."—Mrs. F. P. MULLENBORG, Munford, Ala.

mel. Sea too high, gale too strong. Impossible to try the lifeboats.

"Later sent two boats under Second Officer Mansfield and Fifth Officer Kummel.

"They returned later, respectively with three and ten rescued men.

"As the fire on the Volturino kept away from the after deck, kept maneuvering near and sent three boats away, which made many trips. At 9 o'clock at night the last boat alongside carried Captain. Nobody was left on board. We had succeeded in taking off eighty-eight passengers and the captain's dog. Our boats were then placed in davits and we proceeded full speed ahead.

"The captain of the Volturino tells me that one boat with cabin passengers left the ship early in the morning, but they were spilled. Captain Kummel reported. Another boat containing steerage passengers was smashed and all perished. The third boat possibly got away safely. Carmania and Carmania searching for it.

A thousand cases of gin were stowed under the after deck and when Captain Kummel of the Volturino left his vessel the fire had just reached them. Captain Kriehobm reported.

The Volturino's officers rescued by the Kroomland's boat crew were Captain E. F. Inch, Chief Engineer R. Dewar, Second Engineer Malcomson, Fourth Engineer J. B. Seddon and Fifth Engineer M. Stegmaier. W. Seddon and C. J. Pennington, first and second wireless operators, and H. Perleham, second steward. Among the passengers, apparently all from the steerage, were three children with parents missing. Another wireless dispatch dated today on board the Kroomland said:

"Kroomland cabin unit in praising the heroism of the captain and officers and all crew of the Volturino."

The Red Star officials replied tonight to Captain Kriehobm, directing him to express sympathy to Captain Inch and the officers and passengers of the Volturino. "Also accept for yourself, officers and crew our great appreciation of the meritorious services rendered," the message continued. "The strict use of the lifeboats. Allow passengers to send on their own account any messages to friends or to the press that they wish to forward, provided they are in accordance with the facts."

Wife and Children Saved.
Among the many persons who made inquiries at the office of the Uranium line here today, was the wife of Captain Kriehobm, who said that her husband, Captain Kriehobm, had been on the Volturino. He became hysterical when informed they were safe. Mrs. Kriehobm and her children, who were on the Volturino, were rescued by the Kroomland's boat crew.

Mayor Kline in a letter read at a meeting of the Red Cross emergency relief committee tonight, appealed to citizens to assist in the matter of caring for destitute survivors on their arrival here. Various organizations, and institutions plan to co-operate with the Red Cross in raising funds. The usual immigration rules will be suspended where the Kroomland arrives and efforts will be made to bring families together and send immigrants to their destinations.

Report From Grosz Kuerfuerst.
On Board North German Lloyd Steam-ship Grosz Kuerfuerst by Wireless to Cape Hatteras, Oct. 13.—With 163 survivors from the Volturino, the Kuerfuerst, burned during a gale and abandoned last Friday, the Grosz Kuerfuerst is approaching New York City.

The Grosz Kuerfuerst witnessed some thrilling scenes when their vessel, called by distress signals from the Volturino, arrived in her vicinity.

They found the Volturino burning fiercely and her crew and passengers helpless in the heavy seas. It was learned from wireless messages from the flaming vessel that the fire had been started by an explosion in the forward hold at 7 o'clock on Thursday morning.

Ship's time.

On the arrival of the Grosz Kuerfuerst the flames from the hold of the Volturino were heaped eighty feet into the air through a hatchway. Fifty more of the Volturino's crew and steerage passengers had been killed.

Six boats were lowered from the Volturino's davits. Three of them, still empty, were smashed against the vessel's side, while two with forty passengers capsize, and the launch, which carried the other two with sixty or eighty passengers on board, got away, but apparently were lost in mountainous seas.

Twelve boats were lowered by wireless within half of the Volturino. The Cunarder Carmania was first. She reached the scene about midnight. Then followed the Kroomland, the New York, the Denonian, the La Touraine, the Narragansett, the Minneapolis, the Asian, the Rappahannock and the Car.

The sea was running too high to allow of the taking off of the Volturino's passengers.

During the day time the flames from the Volturino's holds were kept more or less under control, but about 3 p. m. Thursday the fire reached the coal bunkers and it was found necessary to close the bulkheads. The pumps, therefore, were unable to work at full pressure and the flames broke out through the entire forward part of the vessel.

At twenty minutes to 10 on Thursday night another explosion occurred on the Volturino and caused a panic among her departing passengers and crew.

The Grosz Kuerfuerst launched three boats and rescued 163 passengers. The vessel was washed into the sea. One of the rescuing life boats was out for six hours and nearly lost.

All those remaining on the Volturino crowded together at the after end of the vessel and were taken off safely after daybreak, Friday.

Second Officer. E. Lloyd of the Volturino was one of the heroes of the disaster. He fell from a height of twenty feet while repairing the wireless apparatus on board his vessel, but continued to fight the fire all day and at 7 o'clock in the evening made a perilous trip to the Grosz Kuerfuerst in a small boat with three others from the Volturino.

The little craft was left sinking when the four were picked up by one of the life boats from the Grosz Kuerfuerst. The total number of those saved is believed to be 523.

Captain Barr's Story.
Liverpool, Oct. 14.—The Carmania anchored in the Mersey at 1 o'clock this morning. Captain Barr received news-papers and told his story of the Volturino rescue. He said when he reached the Volturino he could see that she was in straits. Her propeller was continually emerging and he saw great flames hanging over the vessel's side. Although it was an almost hopeless thing to do, he felt he must try to lower a boat.

"I tried once," he said, "might have tried four. Our men were all keen to go out. I was glad afterward that I didn't, but it was only the splendid seamanship of the men in charge that enabled us to get our boat and crew aboard again."

"Captain Barr described how he went in search of the missing boats. He said the captain of the Volturino had asked him not to go too far and the Seydlitz had agreed to stand by. But before he had proceeded ten miles a message from the Volturino urged him to return. He then consulted with the navigating officers and acted on a suggestion to drop over some life rafts.

"From my position to windward," he said, "I was not possible to send boats. Even if I were I should not have been able to, because I had taken my position with a definite object."

"Captain Barr then related how two boats, one of them from the Minneapolis, smashed against the sides of the Carmania in trying to get alongside about 4.30 in the morning. Their crews were saved, but the Carmania lost her position in those maneuvers.

Gets Close to Volturino.
At 8.30 o'clock the Carmania got close to the Volturino. Captain Barr had previously notified all the liners of the failure of his attempts to assist and his belief that nothing more was to be done in the existing conditions, but would welcome any suggestion for further attempts while the Carmania was in the vicinity of the Volturino, which was a difficult ship to maneuver, would stand clear and leave them a free hand.

"Captain Barr remarked that doubtless the question will arise why the Carmania

SAFETY AT SEA TO BE DISCUSSED

SUGGESTIONS OF THE UNITED STATES AT LONDON CONFERENCE.

MADE PUBLIC BY REDFIELD

Coincidence That the Proposals Were Made Public on Day of the Volturino Tragedy.

Washington, Oct. 13.—It is a coincidence that on October 10, the very day upon which the steamer Carmania and other ships heard the wireless call for help, sent out by the Volturino, the Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce made public his recommendations for the use of the American delegation to the London International conference on safety at sea.

There are some suggestions to be made by the United States, which if now in use, would have been of service to the stricken Volturino. The secretary will instruct the American delegates to ask for the following regulations:

1. All ocean-going steamers, equipped with electricity, shall carry a searchlight so placed as to illuminate all points of the horizon as far as possible, and of sufficient power to distinguish a ship's 24-foot boat at a distance of not less than one nautical mile on a clear dark night.

2. All light vessels on important outside stations shall be equipped with submarine bells. All ocean-going vessels shall be provided with means for detecting submarine-bell signals.

3. That the international rules of the road, as modified by the carrying of range lights shall be obligatory instead of optional, as at present, and that all vessels shall also carry a fixed stern light. The international rules shall be amended to provide that every vessel navigated in the vicinity of icebergs or ice floes during darkness should go forward at moderate speed, having careful regard to circumstances and conditions; the use of rockets showing red should be restricted to distress signals at night.

4. The application of radiotelegraphy to the collection of weather reports from oceanic areas gives promise of securing to navigators a greater measure of safety from the perils of the sea than has hitherto been possible. Such a service necessarily would be international in character, the expense of which should be shared jointly by the nations most directly concerned. The committee recommends, in the interests of the future development of radio-meteorological services, that the existing meteorological service of each administration adopt as part of its program the organization of a radio service for the coastal waters pertaining to that administration.

5. That meteorological observations be made at Greenwich noon whenever a vessel during the preceding four hours has experienced a barometer reading below 30 and falling continuously or has discovered other symptoms of approaching storm. That class of meteorological information which transcends all others as regards its value to shipping is the storm or hurricane warning, particularly the latter. It should not be a difficult matter to ultimately provide a system of warning in these destructive storms which shall be little, if any, inferior to the system of warnings for storms which pass over the land. The committee considers this warning service as promising more beneficial results than the project of distributing warnings to vessels in mid-ocean, and therefore emphasizes the importance of concentrating efforts at the command of meteorological services on the development of an efficient warning service for coastal and sub-tropical waters.

6. The United States naval observatory has developed a time service by radio which is of great value to shipping, and the committee recommends a consideration of the desirability of requesting all governments to establish a like service.

7. For many years the important steamship lines traversing the North Atlantic ocean between New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other ports have agreed among themselves that their vessels should hold to certain prescribed lanes. This plan should be broadened by making the steamship lanes strictly to steamships. Governments should pass legislation requiring the steamships under their flag to adhere to these lanes. These lanes should be agreed upon in the international conference.

8. That an international ice patrol be established, and that the annual responsibility and expense of maintaining this patrol be assumed by each of the several maritime nations in the zone of the Transatlantic steamship lanes. At all times during the continuance of the patrol there must be at least one vessel present in the icebergs region. The patrol vessels will determine the southerly, easterly and westerly limits of the ice, and keep in touch with these fields as they move southward, that radio messages may be sent out daily giving the whereabouts of the ice, particularly in the vicinity of the regular Transatlantic lanes.

9. That an endeavor be made to reach an agreement with the several maritime nations interested in the Transatlantic trade, as follows: The United States to continue the destruction or removal of derelicts in the North Atlantic west of a line drawn from Cape Sable latitude 34 longitude 70 degrees and thence to the Bahamas, and other maritime nations to maintain a suitable vessel or vessels for the purpose of destroying or removing derelicts east of said line.

although arriving first on the scene, only rescued one person.

"I give you my narrative in detail," he said, "in order to show you how I was employed. I was very carefully employed during the night. I don't think I could have done more."

In answer to questions, Captain Barr said he was obviously in a position to direct the other vessels and considered it better to direct them than to rush in with the object of saving the passengers. He had heard from a boatman who got near the Volturino that the people crowded on the ship were quiet as though a terror were not upon them.

"I think in the circumstances," concluded Captain Barr, "that Captain Inch acted very bravely, considering he was one against so many terror-stricken people."

Denise Panic on Volturino.
London, Oct. 14.—In long story contributed to the Daily Mail by C. E. Hart, of the Associated Newspapers, was a passenger on the Carmania, denied emphatically that there was any sort of panic on the Volturino, but added:

"I hope I may never again see such a sight as I saw on the night of the Volturino's stern when they realized we were powerless to help them."

Describing how the survivors were finally taken off, he says it was amazing how quickly they were lowered over the side and the boats sent away. It looked like an exhibition drill.

The captain of the steamer Devonian, in a wireless message, says the fire in the Volturino broke out in the baggage room forward.

Another wireless dispatch from the operator aboard the Car says that three

First Session of the State Assembly Devoid of Sensation or Bickering.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 12.—Prohibition law enforcement, the theme to come before the extraordinary session of the general assembly convened today at the call of Governor Hooper, was put on the legislative ways by regular and independent Democratic members at a meeting designated as a "love feast." The brief session of the legislature was peaceful. Routine business was transacted harmoniously and without the presence of "gunmen," who threw a preceding session of the house into a turmoil a few days ago when the same subject was under consideration. Apparently the only true friends of the proposed measure were the regular Democrats, and whether their colleagues, the foes of anti-liquor laws, will conduct a filibuster.

The meeting of regulars and independents was the first move in what promises to be a strenuous period for the lawmakers. It was held in the supreme court room and was attended by a large number. A chairman was appointed and after a brief discussion a committee of ten was appointed to draft a bill. The measure, it was decided, the meeting should provide means for the removal of the prohibition law already upon the statute books. The anti-jux bills, reported at a previous session, were endorsed and slated to be presented at this meeting of the general assembly. Another measure providing for the removal of clerical officers was sanctioned and an effort will be made to pass it.

The date for the holding of the election was set for November 15. Good roads enthusiasts believe that the bond issue will be carried by a large majority.

daughter was taken with a very unusual itch on the back of her hand. It grew larger and caused her more trouble. When she would scratch it, it would bleed and get very ugly looking, so I doctored it myself about a year, and at last it broke out on both hands and arms, and even on my face. As she would scratch, and was so tortured and suffered so from the itching, that I took her to our doctor, who recommended Rainol Soap and Rainol Ointment.

"I sent for samples and after the first application the itching and inflammation was removed, and I kept it up night and morning, and in about two weeks the pain was gone she complained very little, so I got a fifty-cent jar, and before that was half gone the trouble had entirely disappeared." One-fourth of Total Is Represented.
Fordyce Says Mexico Situation Causes Insolvency.

St. Louis, Oct. 15.—One hundred thousand shares of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad—one-fourth of the total—were represented at a meeting of the stockholders this afternoon, called to devise means to harmonize the apparent conflict between the committee of trustees and stockholders and James Campbell of St. Louis, vice president of the company, who recently invited the co-operation of stockholders in protecting their interests.

A. T. Perkins and S. W. Fordyce, both of St. Louis, were continued as a committee to represent the shareholders who attended today's meeting.

Mr. Fordyce attributed the receivership of the railroad to the troubles in Mexico. "If it had not been for the trouble in Mexico, I don't believe the Frisco would be insolvent today," he said. "The Brownsville road was hit hard by that trouble and that road was one of our most important traders in the southwest. The Frisco has rich equities and I believe the bondholders will be satisfied when they have received their principal and interest on the bonds they own in Arizona and New Mexico in time to make us ten to fifteen million dollars and I am very hopeful of the future."

"We lost $2,500,000 by reason of the floods in the last few years and that may not be paid by the railroads," Mr. Perkins said the operation of the 2-passenger law would cause the road to lose not less than $1,500,000 revenue for the fiscal year 1913-1914.

Mr. Fordyce said the stockholders might not be able to elect new holders, but he did not think the assessors would be large.
